Northern contemporaries, has been putting the Foreign Office right in regard

the Foreign Office in the use of the English language. 'Again,' says Mr Kinnear, 'the Foreign Minister, while thoroughly in sympathy with missionary enterprise in the East, and convinced that it is justified by its fruits. at the same time entertains a profound respect for Native susceptibilities in China. These may be "out of touch" with the nineteenth contury; they may be fanatical, tyrannous and grossly ludicrous and reactionary. But, as the Foreign Office sees them, they are the weaknesses of an ancient civilization, and, in Lord Salisbury's opinion, must be accepted as a factor of the situation. and the missionaries should therefore respect them, or at least not run openly or violently or indifferently hostile to To run indifferently hostile! Is this another Foreign Office combination; or must we give Mr Kinnear credit for inventing it? At all events, the Foreign Office need be ander no apprehension as to any attempt on the part of missionaries to perform a feat of that kind. They would not know how to set about it, and if they tried it they would most certainly fail, owing to their not having a sufficiently accentuated understanding of what is required in forder to be hostile and indifferent in regard to any one person, place or thing at one and the same time. It was quite a matter of course that, after this interview, Lord Salisbury should have 'taken measures to have the above views promulgated in the missionary districts of the Empire. requiring their observance as compensation to England for the cost and per-IN the Manufacture of these Waters the sonul sacrifice entailed by specially guarding these particular fields of religious labour. From this it would appear, however, that the interview must have taken place quite a long promulgated in the missionary distriots. Mr Kinnear, we are glad to see, speaks comfortably to the British residents in China and assures them that." despite a new head at the Foreign Office. they may look with tranquility upon the future. He is undoubtedly a cheerful kind of prophet, for he has even a word of hope to give to the heavy-laden teamen. Gladstone has been advised by Sir Andrew Clark, he says, 'to abstain from Indian tea and return to the good old China leaf. As Mr Gladstone is a great tea-drinker, visiting half-adozen Downgers' kettledrums in an afternoon, this will mean the return of Chi-FRUIT SYRUPS : - LEMON, LIME | no ten all over the West End. What with a policy of admonitory reserve and Mr Gladstone drinking nothing but China tea when he goes to Dowagers' 'kettledrums,' the Britisher in China may surely possess his soul in peace. with Plain or Aerated Water, they make This is the kind of thing that gladdens the hearts of old British residents in China. They like to have a smart young man from London come out to China and stay for a day or two-so that he may fully grasp the whole situation and get an accentuated understanding, as it were, of all that is going on or has been going or form the last thousand years -and then go back to London, and, without any reserve, 'admonitory' or otherwise, put his observations and opinions in print and tell the world exactly how matters stand as between Great Britain and China. Old British residents simply adore a globe-trotter who has the wonderful faculty for learning more about the Far East while he is having his hair cut, so to speak, than they have been able to learn in twenty or thirty. years. Mr Kinnesr evidently belongs to this gifted and happy class. He comes and sees and understands with an understanding that is accentuated. Matters over which the British resident in his blindness has been puzzling poor brain for years become beautifully simple to a man like Mr Kinnsar. What is the reason? Simply that he keeps his eyes Its powerful antifebrile qualities tend to open and sees all that is going on. He mentions casually, as if it were ematter of no moment, that he found himself sitting opposits the Chinese Ambassador at dinner recently. But the barometrical reading for Amoy that day was given, as we have stated, 29.72, and as Amoy is between Swatow and Foochow, the situation was somewhat perplexing. It was in these circumstances that a shipmaster, to whom the whereabouts of the typhoon was of the utmost importance, applied to the Director of the Observatory for information regarding the reading given for Amoy. The request elicited, not the information desired, but the caution against accepting the figures given by the newspapers, which had faithfully reproduced what. Dr Doberck sent to them. It the Director of the Observatory thinks that advice of this kind will make up for the paucity and unreliability of his meteorological information, Ar the Magistracy this afternoon, Mr.H. he is much mistaken. If the Observatory information up to this point was such as to perplex shipmosters, that which followed tended only to increase their doubts, for after having placed the miles, Dr Doberck at p.m. yesterday gave directions to Hongkong: while his latest notice. issued this afternoon, states that the centre is east of the colony, within a hundred miles and nearly stationary. When it comes to a question as to whether it is the typhcon or Dr Doberck that is erratic, the general opinion will no doubt be in favour of the latter explanation. It would be something new if a typhoon came within the ken of the colony without the Director of the Observatory taking advantage of the opportunity to put his loot in it.

It is a case in which, as a matter of fact, the person claiming the money back had injured the person from whom he claimed back the money-Durrant . The Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England and Wales, L. R. 6, Queen's Bench Division, 234. In that case, the plaintiff, by mistake, paid to the defend auta, who were owners of the tithes of a parish, tithe rent charge in respect of land not in his occupation. The plaintiff did not discover the mistake until the two years limited by 6 and 7 Wm. 4, e: 11. for the recovery of a tithe rent charge lands accually chargeable,' and it was hold that there was no duty east on the plaintiff in relation to the defendants which made his delay in discovering the mistake laches on his part : and that he was entitled to recover back the amount paid as money paid under a mistake of fact. It seems to me that that case which is a still stronger one than the present is conclusive in favour of the defendant upon this point. I must, therefore, give judgment for the plaintiff for the amount paid into Court with leave to take that money out of Court-but, as it is admitted that a cheque for this amount was sent and tendered to the plaintiff's a higher before this action was brought, must order the plaintiff to pay the defendant all the costs of this suit.
